TIES MAKE A SECRET MOVE. Question of Curtailing the Sport in Various Ways Has Been Under Serious Consideration by a Specially Appointed Com-mittee Whose Report Is Calculated to

Stir Up Undergraduates and Alumni. BOSTON, Feb. 15.—It has leaked out here that for some time past the faculties of leading Eastern universities have been considering the advisability of curtailing the sport of football as much as possible, because of a belief that too much time is devoted to the game by the players and student-body to some extent to the detriment of good scholarship. The movement has been entirely secret and it is not the desire of those behind it to have the facts made public until all plans are consummated. From the best information obtainable the faculties of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell and Columbia are in the scheme, which has been discussed at length on many different

In order to sift matters down so that tangible results might be reached, the faculties named herein appointed a committee to go over the ground and draw up some sort of an agreement which should govern football at these universities in particular and at any other institutions that might see fit to adopt the plan. The committee was organized about six months ago, entirely without the knowledge of the undergraduates or the graduate athletic authorities. The committee was provided, where it was possible, with data concerning the work of every football player who had been a member of a 'Varsity eleven for several years, also his standing in studies, his physical condition before and after training for the eleven, together with his trim after leaving college. Information, too, as to the amount of time devoted by each player to the game, the length of the preliminary training season, the expenses entailed and the number of men taken onto the field at the beginning of each season by the coaches was placed in the hands of the committee, to say nothing of the list of studies of each man, his average attendance at lectures and recitations, and the effect of injuries sustained.

With this material in hand the committee found that it had a long task. Plenty of time was devoted to it, however, and soon a report was framed to be submitted to the faculties, In this report, it is understood, it was suggested that the number of games to be played by each eleven with other universities be limited say to six or less; that no preliminary training before the opening of college should be allowed; that each player be probibited from devoting more than a certain number of hours a day to practice and games; that all players must attend lectures and recitations in such a way as to satisfy the requirements of the faculties; that all players be compelled to devote a certain number of hours each day to their studies, and his scholarship must rank higher than the average; that every candidate for a place on a 'Varsity eleven must be subjected to a rigid physical examination before, during and after each season; that uniform eligibility rules be placed in effect and enforced to the letter; that schedules of games must first be submitted to the faculties for approval; that the engagement of coaches, trainers and other attendants must be under the control of a faculty committee. The committee arrived at these conclusions at a recent meeting held in New York during the holidays. Since then the faculties have been deliberating with the result that fault is found because no penalty is attached to the proposed agreement. It is, therefore, argued that even if these five universities should see fit to adopt such rules, if one of them violated the compact there would be no way to seek redress. It is believed that some of the recommendations are considered too severe and that when the report is sent back to the committee it will have been greatly modified in parts. It will be accompanied by a suggestion, it is said. calling for a penalty of this sort:

If a university, after agreeing to live up to the rules which must first be made satisfactory to all interested parties, breaks its pledge, it can be punished by a refusal by the other universities to arrange any further games with its eleven. It is intended not to penalize individuals, but to come back at the offending university itself. Further, it is stated that the faculties will recommend to the committee that before the revised agreement is signed it. must first be submitted to all the universities a party to this movement for any changes that may be deemed advisable.

It can be seen, therefore, that the faculties are moving with deliberation, so that when they conclude to make an official move it will be ironelad and, in their estimation, perfectly just. The committee will hold another meeting shortly. It is thought that the new rules will not be ready, however, to affect football next fall, but will be enforced in 1901.

A strong protest from both undergraduates and alumni of the universities involved is expected as soon as the faculties make public the plans outlined in the above despatch. The the plans outlined in the above despatch. The fact that the various graduate advisory committees of the leading colleges have not been consulted is almost sure to stir up the influential college men who have hitherto had control of football. They have been congratulating themselves recently upon the excellent manner in which football was conducted last fall and the comparatively few injuries sustained by players on the big teams. Barring a few minor changes in the football rules, the graduate directors of the sport have often said that football as it is now needs no tinkering. The argument advanced by certain faculty members, that the big football games last fall seriously interfered with the scholarship of both players and students, is not listened to with seriousness by the graduates, who believe that fostering the best interests of the sport does not consist in faculty interference. It is all well enough the best interests of the sport does not consist in faculty interference. It is all well enough to have a certain amount of faculty control, the graduates say, but it is too much of a good thing when the real interest in the pastime is to be killed by needless restrictions. Altogether there is prospect of some friction between the faculties and the alumni over a THRESHIE'S LOST CHANCE. Boston Billiardist Misses a Great Opp tunity for a Record.

Charles Threshie of Boston and Dr. L. L. Mial of New York finished their schedule in the Class A billiard championship of the A. A. U. at the Knickerbocker A. C. last night. The New Englander won by a score of 400 to 161 in the easiest kind of fashion. He started out in whiriwind style, and when he had scored a run of 79 in the ninth inning and piled in another one of 39 in the tenth, placing his total at 236, there wasn't a man or woman in the crowd but thought he would smash the amateur record for the high average. The feeling of confidence that he would do wonders increased as the game wore on. He followed one double figure run with another from the fourteenth to the twentieth innings. and when he finished he only needed 40 points to complete his string. If he could make those 40 points in 6 innings, which was at the rate of less than 7 for an inning, he would have beaten the record, but the strain was too great, and aside from a run of 20 in the twenty-third inning, he failed utterly to smash any figures. However, he managed to take an average of nearly 13, which is the third highest of the tournament. His best run was 79, Poor Dr. Mial, his opponent, simply wasn't in and a countenance full of spirit and intelliit after the Boston man got fairly started. Corbett Still Says the Fight Is on the Level.

In order to convince the sporting public that his coming fight with Champion Jeffries will not be a "fake," Jim Corbett yesterday posted $2,500 with a stakeholder, with the provision that if in the latter's judgment the battle is not on the level the money can be turned over to any charity to be designated later. Corbett makes a vehement statement that he will whip Jeffries beyond a doubt, that no arrangement has been made for him to get a decision over the champion unless it is deserved, and that he jought the champion unless it is deserved, and that he jought the champion unless it is deserved, and that he jought the champion unless it is deserved, and that he jought to record. rest of the trotting horses owned by the late Robert Bonner, excepting only the noted old Maud S., 2:084, found new owners yesterday afternoon at the Fasig-Tipton sale in Madison Square Garden. The announcement that they were to be sold brought out one of the largest crowds ever seen at a horse auction hereabouts. There were many prominent and wealthy horse fanciers in the assemblage, and they made the bidding lively for the choice ones of the collection. It was shortly after 2 o'clock that the bugler, who calls the horses into the ring as their catalogue numbers are reached, sounded "Auld Lang Syne" on his silver horn, and a boy and a chestnut mare came out Tr boy and a chestnut mare came out on the miniature track. She was down in the back; her tail hardly reached to her hocks, and her coat was rough and long. But her clean, bony head, with thin, tapering ears, and a countenance full of spirit and intelligence was fine enough to have served as a sculptor's model.

The color 2:344, ch. g., 18:1 by Resistion Tricolor 2:3

The crowd quickly recognized the old chestnut mare as Maud S., the most noted of all living trotters, and a ripple of applause followed her around the Garden. She put her aristocratic head down close to the ruddy cheek of the lad who led her, making quite a picture as she walked nervousty yet quietly through the crowd. The bugler switched to "Yankee Doodle" when the old turf queen started downstairs to her boxstall in the basement. Just as she was going off the track Praytell was coming on, and the jealous old mare let fly at him with both heels as they passed.

Praytell was the first horse in the collection to be sold. The mammoth chestnut gelding came out looking as fine as the proverbial fiddle as Al Thomas jogged him round the ring hooked to a speeding wagon. He was started at $2,000 and for a time it looked as though $3,500 or $4,000 might take the great Ma road horse, but soon the bidders got down to business and the offers ran up to $5,800 in a jiffy, almost. This was the bid of Trainer W.

Chairman Gerlich, whose general tone was that of a man determined "to die game," received a pretty general sentiment by saying that we have just gone through "an eventful year" in connection with racing. Somehow there have been "numerous changes." The L. A. W. meets had diminished. Most of them had been financial failures. The "passing of the club" had brought about the decline of amateur racing, although the plan had been hit upon to devote $2 out of the $2.50 registration fee to the initiation into the League of 1,500 amateurs. All this notwithstanding, in the chairman's opinion, the L. A. W. had been "fittingly represented" at Montreal, and the Boston meet had proved "a most interesting contest." The head of the doomed Racing Board almost reached that were the Assembly so minded, the L. A. W. could still carry on the racing game "on a substratum of sportsmanship and honesty."

Reports were also read by the chairman of the other committees.
At the evening session President Keenan nominated as his successor Conway W. Sams of Baltimore, who was elected. For First Vice-President R. T. Kingsbury was nominated by Aaron Wolran of Massachusetts and seconded by Samuel A. Boyle of Pennsylvania; George Cooke of Rhode Island was nominated by Valgeburgh of Wisconsin and seconded by Chaster of Ohio. On a division 121 votes were east for Kingsbury and 54 for Cooke, who graciously asked that the vote he made unanimous for his rival. "Good Roads" Choate of Minnesota was unanimously elected Second Vice-President on nomination of Fullerton of New York and Chief Consul Rudderow of New Yersey. With appropriate unanimity James Tattersall of New Jersey was re-elected Treasurer. Messrs, Small, Wolfson and Skyles were nominated for the Auditing Committee by Secretary Bassett and they were duly elected.

It was with regret that Chief Consul Earl's elected that the next place of meeting be Described. mg Committee by secretary Bassett and they were duly elected.

It was with regret that Chief Consul Earl's motion that the next place of meeting be Detroit could not be immediately accepted, owing to the possible difficulties of transportation.

The Secretary announced the receipt of a communication from Susan B. Anthony, appealing to the L. A. W. to use its influence on benalf of the enfranchisement of women. Bassett was instructed to give the letter a "courteous acknowledgement." The following resolution was then introduced by Sterling Elliott, which was carried:

R solved, By the National Assembly of League of

R tolted, By the National Assembly of League of American Wheelmen, that we heartly recommend the passage of the bill now pending in Congress, making larger appropriations for the United States Office of Read Inquiry, to enable it to be permanently established and able to respond to the calls conmunally made upon it for educational assistance in its field of work in the interest of American agriculture.

A motion for $3,500 as the President's salary was accepted, though not until an amendment suggesting a payment of $10 per day for every day's work done for the League with $4 per day when away from home and mileage, had been made and witherawn.

A motion of Earl that the L. A. W. should favor the utilizing of prison and convict labor on highways was also favorably received.

Then came ex-Fresident Potter's long-locked-for series of amendments, which collectively implied the utter relinquishment of all connection with racing. lectively implied the after relinquishment of all connection with racing.

Those who expected a bitter struggle over this all-important question must have been sorely disampointed. No funeral was ever conducted with more solemn decorum, or a more unanimous display of resignation to the inevitable. And when it was found that, with the exception of three, Messrs, Seward. Kerrison and Myler (two of whom had been, or were still, handicappers) every delegate had answered aye, a shout of joy greeted the announcement.

FLATULENCE

Flatulence means a collection of wind and gases in the stomach and intestines and is an unpleasant and annoying condition. The statement from a salesman living at Edgewater, Ill., which follows, proves that Ripans Tabules relieve it entirely. "I have taken Ripans Tabules for nearly three years with extremely satisfactory results," says the gentleman. "I used to be constantly troubled with flatulency and biliousness, but now rarely have an attack even when I neglect taking the Tabules. Being an Englishman I am naturally fond of good strong tea and this used to cause me a great deal of flatulency. Now I can take several cups without fear, as a Ripans Tabule will take care of all the tea I can drink; in fact, I need no longer be careful as to what I eat, providing I take a Tabule afterward. I can partake of the richest dishes without fear, whereas formerly I frequently had to diet myself. I always carry a supply in my vest pocket in one of the small glass vials which I replenish from the large bottles you sell."
